

CONTENTS

Acknowledgments	ix
Introduction: Limiting and Developing Individual Consent: Children and Anglo-American Revolutionary Ideology	1
1: Children, Inherited Power, and Patriarchal Ideology	17
2: “Borne That Princes Subjects”? or “Christianity Is No Man’s Birth Right”?: The Religious Debate over Inherited Right and Consent to Membership	45
3: The Dilemmas of Government by Consent and the Problem of Children: Force, Influence, Implied Consent, and Inherited Obligation	87
4: Subjects or Citizens? Inherited Right versus Reason, Merit, and Virtue	129
5: “To Stop the Mouths” of Children: Reason and the Common Law	150
6: Understanding Intent: Children and the Reform of Guilt and Punishment	181
7: The Emergence of Parental Custody: Children and Consent to Contracts for Land, Goods, and Labor	230
8: “Partly by Persuasions and Partly by Threats”: Parents, Children, and Consent to Marriage	288
The Empire of the Fathers: From Birth to the Consent of Whom?	338
Appendix: Legal Treatises Used by Americans before the Nineteenth Century	369
Index	377

ILLUSTRATIONS

Plate 1. Henry VI	349
Plate 2. Henry Darnall III	350